

Spice Up Your Dinner with a Murder Mystery

Sunday November 30, 2008

If Hong Kong's selection of world class restaurants isn't enough to wet your appetite, maybe playing Poirot over the dinner table will be. Diners signing up for a night of murder mystery, aside from enjoying a first class four-course meal, are treated to a cast of actors playing out a murder mystery around them. Set in the appropriately named "Cooked Goose Tavern" in 1898 England, the interactive show sees actors and audience attempt to discover who murdered Sarah Dorritt.

The Murder Mystery group is currently touring around Hong Kong's luxury hotels with the next performance scheduled for the 20th of December in the Marco Polo Hotel. Tickets are priced at a cool HK$899.
